US interest expense on the national debt hit a record $1.4 trillion over the last 12 months. -Kobessi Letter

- Since 2020, the cost of servicing US public debt has nearly TRIPLED.
- If rates remain stable, interest payments are set to rise to $1.7 trillion by November 2028.

- As a result, interest will surpass Social Security spending as the government's largest outlay for the first time.

CENTRAL BANK, FEDERAL RESERVE, LENDING & STIMULUS:

Bank of England: Markets are increasingly expecting the BoE to hold its 3.75% rate through year-end, despite UK inflation rising to 2.9% in July. A Reuters economist poll found 56 of 64 economists expect no further 2026 moves.

Federal Reserve: Softer U.S. data are pushing markets toward a less-hawkish Fed outlook. Traders currently see roughly a 70% probability of no September hike, while investors are watching the Fed's July minutes for clues about the new leadership's policy thinking.

Bank of Japan: The BoJ is facing renewed pressure to raise rates, with markets pricing roughly a two-thirds chance of a 25-bp hike at its next meeting. Japanese bond yields are also surging, with the 10-year near a 30-year high.
